Excerpt: .and is better here than any where else. Though he appears pretty well now, were he to leave this who knows but he might relapse. No doubt he would like to return to the world, but many there would distrust and despise him--no one does so here; and, upon the whole, I think it my duty to keep him a little while longer. Besides, this place is very expensive to keep up, and I do not exactly see how I could do without him. The person who soothes his conscience thus, may be, comparatively, rather a good sort of man, and yet in this be guilty of a fearful amount of cruelty and injustice toward a fellow creature, whose soul he is slowly but surely breaking upon the agonizing wheel of hope deferred. And with the lower class of patients, there is a temptation...
